Middle School Grief Guidelines

Developmental Level: Are more verbal and cognitively process information at higher levels; comprehend death as final and unavoidable which may provoke feelings of helplessness, hopelessness, and increase risk-taking behaviors.

Grief Behaviors: Physical responses including: headaches, stomach problems, sleep disturbances, and changes in eating habits; argumentative; withdrawal; sullenness; anger and fighting; sleepiness; lack of concentration and attentiveness; risk-taking behaviors; unpredictable ups and downs or moodiness; erratic, inconsistent reactions.

How to Help:

- Expect and accept mood swings.
- Provide a supportive environment where students can share, when needed.
- Anticipate increased physical concerns including illness, body aches, and pains.
- Answer questions honestly and provide factual information.
- Allow student to choose whom and how he/she gets support.
- Encourage participation in a school-based educational support group.
- Allow some flexibility in completing school work.
- Encourage physical outlets to release grief.

Adapted from the National Association of School Psychologists online resources for crisis, trauma, and grief.
Piechowski, P., Coping with the Sudden Death of a Student.